The old democratic leaders are illustrating the saying of Solomon, "though hou shouldst bray a fool in a mortarith a pestile, yet will not his foolishases depart from him." One would think the democratic party had been brayed hard enough during the last half-dozen years to cure some of its follies, but the leaders insist in travelant many control of the cont eral. He says:

are not a few good men who are so devoted to the work of teaching as a kind you when such blind politicians lead a party, is it strange that both fall into the ditch, and only sink the deeper the more they struggle to extricate themselves? The general principle advocated by Mr. Pendleton as covering what he thinks is the true policy of the hat he thinks is the true policy of the to attract students is to put up big brick to attract students is to put up big brick locks and to pay too little heed to securify, he stated as follows: am in favor of no change in the tution. I would recognize the of the southern States to their old on in the federal system instantition delay, without experiment, and condition, save only that they will be containing the very best professors, and admit its provisions to be noting rule of the State and federal system instanting the very best professors.

If the democrats approve the President's policy, they sustain this enforced acquiescence in the freedom of the negro, and they cannot give countenance to the conservative party of the South, as Mr. Pendieton is doing, without showing themselves to be false and treacherous in their professions of support to the ble shopping besides. They talk a good their deal about the war, still cling to State to one rights, assert that Jeff Davis is a highor the oner. It they mean what they say in approving the President's course, they must co-operate in the work of emancipation with the truly loyal men of the South. If they intend to strike hands with the pro-slavery party and to encourage resistance to emancipation, let them withdraw their false professions and say boldly what they do mean. Editors Intelligencer:

There have recently appeared in your paper several articles in relation to the status of the countles of Berkeley and Jefferson, and among them is one from Mr. Dawes, a member of Congress from Massachusetts, who takes the position that although the legislation on the part of the State of Virginia may be sufficient, as it is admitted to be, to admit the said two counties maned State sufficient, as it is admitted to be, to admit the said two counties into, and make them part of, her territory; yet it is still necessary of the rich and undeveloped mineral wealth of the counties of Goochland, of, her territory; yet it is still necessary stitution of the State of West Virginia declares that: "additional territory may be admitted into and become part of this State, with the consent of the legislature." be admitted into and become part of this State, with the consent of the legislature."

Congress, then, has consented that "additional territory may be admitted into this State, with the consent of the legislature." The General Assembly of Virginia has consented that the people of Berkeley and Jefferson counties should say whether or not their counties should say whether or not their counties should become part of West Virginia. The Governor of Virginia has certified that the people of Berkeley and Jefferson voted in favor of their counties being united to the State of West Virginia, and the legislature of West Virginia has given its unanimous consent that the said counties "may be admitted into and become part of this State" by passing acts deelaring that said counties are "admitted into and made parts of this State." Does not this action of the legislature, being within the authority conferred by Congress, settle conclusively the status of these counties? Will Mr. Dawes deny it? Can it be denied?
